Workforce has not kept up with demand in crucial industry

"How about salad. Do I have any tuna open?" he replies.

Kulig spoons the tuna and slices cherry tomatoes into a bowl of salad greens, then sticks a fork into the mixture and carefully guides it into Williams' mouth.

She is one of several personal care aides who perform daily life tasks that Williams, 62, cannot do on his own because he was born with a neuromuscular disorder that deformed his arms and hands. The aides, he said, are the lifeline that allows him to remain at home and work full time for the Center for Independent Living in Scranton.

Maintaining independence has become increasingly challenging for him and others who rely on at-home care because of a critical workforce shortage facing the home health care industry locally and statewide.

Longtime home health aide works to make difference for clients

BY TERRIE MORGAN-BESECKER STAFF WRITER

Priscilla Maciejeski grabs her bag of supplies from her car as she prepares to enter Regina McAvoy's apartment at the Delaware Towers complex in Scranton.

McAvoy, 72, suffers from multiple sclerosis and other medical conditions that robbed her of the ability to do many of life's daily tasks.

Maciejeski, a personal care aide with Allied Services Integrated Health System, is there to help.

It's 1:45 p.m. and McAvoy is already her fourth client of the day. Maciejeski, 63, ignores the slight fatigue that begins to set in. She's got to make McAvoy's lunch — a chicken salad sandwich on a hard roll — and tidy up the room before heading out to do McAvoy's grocery shopping.

Slowing market pinches home upgrades

Businesses lose out when owners put renovation projects on hold.

> BY MAE ANDERSON ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — The chill in the housing market is rippling out to the carpenters, landscapers and other small businesses that lose out when fewer homeowners are renovating their properties.

Inflation was already causing some homeowners to delay big renovation projects as prices for building materials, fixtures and appliances jumped. More recently, higher mortgage rates have put a damper on the number of homes being sold.

At the beginning of the year, carpenter Bill Albritton, who has owned Albritton Custom Carpentry near Charlotte, North Carolina, since 2004, was booked months in advance and completing full custom kitchen cabinet replacements in homes in the historic districts of Charlotte. But he's seen a slowdown over the past two months.

In the Charlotte metropolitan area, the number of homes sold fell 19% between June and July, and are down about 21% from July a year ago, according to the Re/Max monthly National Housing Report.

Albritton is booked out 30 days in advance, compared to the usual 90 to 160 days. Meanwhile, his costs have gone up by more than 30%

Dunmore kicks off centennial celebration

Rain didn't put a damper on the kickoff to Dunmore's Centennial Celebration the evening of Aug. 27.

Dunmoreans lined the streets to watch a firemen's parade featuring more than 40 pieces of firefighting apparatus, firefighters from communities throughout Lackawanna and Wayne counties, the Royal Eagle Drum and Bugle Corps and the Dunmore High School marching band.

In the evening of Aug. 28, the Centennial Queen's Coronation Ball would be held at the Masonic Temple in Scranton. Pennsylvania Gov. David Lawrence would be on hand to crown 19-year-old Carol Sandone, of Electric Street, as Miss Dunmore. Sandone had also served as Miss Buck while in high school. Her court of centennial princesses included Mary Ann Dolinish. Jeanette Bardini, Louise Palumbo, Angela Rinaldi, Jean DeMarco, Dawn Tallo, Carmel Ann Mecca and Cathy Seumenicht. The queen's pages were John Viola and Bill Coar.

Another highlight of the centennial celebration was the historical pageant "The Open Door."

Some 250 actors, dancers and other performers, over six evenings and starting Aug. 29, would tell the story of Dunmore through a series of 16 vignettes. Shows would be presented on a stage constructed at the Dunmore High School stadium.

GREAT DAY FOR SERIOUS FUN

Electric City Classic brings cyclists back downtown for first time since 2019

BY TERRIE MORGAN-BESECKER STAFF WRITER

It's 15 minutes before showtime and the trash talk is heating up among participants vying to become a big deal in the Big Wheel Wars at the Electric City Classic cycling event Saturday afternoon.

'You might as well write 'Peoples Security Bank' on there," Bill Terrinoni, a member of the Peoples Security Bank & Trust team, says as project coordinator Liz Baldi walks by with the coveted trophy.

'We may not win, but you won't win either because I'm going to take you guys out," Brian Mahlstedt, a member of the FNCB Bank team, jokingly taunts back.

The rivals were among five four-member relay teams that tested their pedaling power and ability to get up and off the ground-level tricycles during the first day of the twoday Electric City Classic.

The event, a project of the nonprofit economic development group Scranton Tomorrow and presented by Geisinger, concludes Sunday with the Electric City Hill Climb a short cycling sprint up Olive Street, between Taylor and Prescott avenues in the city's Hill Section, from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Saturday's main event called a criterium — featured professional cyclists who zipped around a short-circuit course that lapped around several blocks in the city's downtown.

The athletes raced at speeds up to 45 mph, making multiple sharp turns as they vied for the top prize of $10,000 and title as the state's criterium racing champion.

Kimberly Stoveld of Philadelphia won the women's race, beating 21 competitors, while Danny Estevez of Massachusetts bested 78 other racers in the men's division.

Organizers first brought the race to Scranton in 2019 to help promote the downtown. The COVID-19 pandemic scuttled it in 2020 and forced the cancellation of the criterium portion of the race last year.

thrilled to have it back," said Leslie Collins, president and CEO of Scranton Tomorrow. "It's a great opportunity to bring the community together and, most importantly, for economic development as we bring racers, their families and spectators to the downtown."

In addition to the criterium race, other events Saturday included handcycle races, a group ride on the Lackawanna River Heritage Trail and a children's bicycle race.

The Big Wheel Wars, which in addition to Peoples Bank and FNCB featured teams from PNC Bank, Fidelity Bank and Trust and the Greater Scranton Chamber of Commerce, were a big hit with spectators.

"It's a lot of fun, especially when they incorporate fun events like this with professional racing," said Todd Pousley of Scranton, who was rooting on the Chamber of Commerce team with his daughter, Addison, 11, and his girlfriend, Ashley Shamansky of Bloomsburg.

Area Agency on Aging. That's left families struggling to meet their loved ones' needs and keep them out of an institutional setting, such as a nursing home or personal care home.

"I can't tell you how many calls I get from people looking for help," said Tracy Hunt, assistant vice president of in-home services for Allied Services Integrated Health System, which provides in-home personal care and health services to thousands of people in Northeast Pennsylvania. "They don't know where to turn."

Statewide, there were 107,829 elderly and physically disabled people receiving home-based services through the state's Community Health Choices program as of March, according to the latest data available from the state Department of Human Services.

That's an 8.4% increase since January 2020, according to DHS. As that need grows, the labor force has not kept up with demand. The federal Bureau of Labor Statistics projects that by 2030, there will be nearly 600,000 open positions nationwide, or a 32.6% increase from 2020, including nearly 40,000 in Pennsylvania.

Unable to walk, lift his arms or grasp objects, Williams has always relied on his aides to feed, dress, bathe and assist him with bathroom breaks.

He's always had enough help, but he had a close call late last year after two aides quit within a two-week period. He found replacements at the last minute, but the experience left him with a "very, very uneasy feeling."

Henning said she's hopeful the state will consider additional increases to Medicaid funding for home health care so it can recruit and retain workers, otherwise the situation promises to worsen.

In a recent survey, 98% of PHA members said they declined referrals in the last year because of staffing shortages. That results in more people having to go to nursing homes or personal care facilities — a far more costly alternative for the state, Henning said.

The real cost, Henning said, is measured not in dollars, but the toll on families and clients denied care because there was no one to

BY ERIC TUCKER ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A newly released FBI document helps flesh out the contours of an investigation into classified material at former President Donald Trump's Florida estate. But plenty of questions remain, especially because half the affidavit, which spelled out the FBI's $\,$ rationale for searching the property, was blacked out.

That document, which the FBI submitted so it could get a warrant to search Trump's winter home, provides new details about the volume and top secret nature of what was retrieved from Mar-a-Lago in January. It shows how Justice Department officials had raised concerns months before the search that closely held government secrets were being illegally stored — and then returned in August with a court-approved warrant and located even more classified records at the property.

It all raises questions whether a crime was committed and, if so, by whom. Answers may not come quickly.

A department official this month described the investigation as in its early stages, suggesting more work is conduct an assessment of any risk to tion is active and criminal in nature. national security potentially created by the documents being disclosed.

What is the FBI investigating?

Judge plans to name a special master

A federal judge in Florida told the Justice Department on Saturday to provide her with more specific information about the classified records removed from former President Donald Trump's Florida estate and said it was her "preliminary intent" to appoint a special master in the case.

The two-page order from U.S. District Judge Aileen Cannon signals she's inclined to grant a request from Trump's lawyers, who asked for the appointment of an independent special master to review the records taken from Mar-a-Lago and identify any that may be protected by executive privilege. The judge scheduled a Thursday hearing to discuss the matter further. The special master appointment, if it happens, is unlikely to significantly affect the direction of the Justice Department investigation.

The FBI has not identified all "potential criminal confederates nor located all evidence related to its investigation."

Lower prices for drugs will take time in new law

BY AMANDA SEITZ

ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — After decades of failed attempts, Democrats passed legislation that aims to rein in the soaring costs of drugs for some in the United States.

It will take years for people to realize some of the most significant savings promised in the climate and health care bill that President Joe Biden signed this month.

The bill mostly helps the roughly 49 million people who sign up for Medicare's drug coverage. But many will be left out from direct savings after lawmakers stripped cost-savings measures for a majority of those covered by private health insurance.

A look at how some might benefit from the drug savings provisions in the "Inflation Reduction Act" and how drugmakers might push back on those efforts.

Drug negotiations

For the first time, Medicare can negotiate the price of its costliest drugs.

In the U.S., "we've never had any entity that was negotiating on behalf of such a large group of people before," said Leigh Purvis, the director of AARP's health care costs and access.

That new bargaining power won't kick in until 2025, when Medicare is able to haggle over the price of 10 drugs covered by its prescription plan. By 2029, Medicare will be able to negotiate the cost of as many as 60 drugs.

It will take some time because the Health and Human Services Department will need to develop a plan for selecting which drugs will be negotiated. The complicated rule-making process will take years to devise and face intense lobbying and scrutiny from the pharmaceutical industry, which is eager to carve out loopholes in the new rules.

"The biggest lift is definitely going to be negotiations gram, and they're going to do a lot of hiring," Purvis added. The savings are expected to be huge. The nonpartisan Congressional Budget Office estimates costs could fall by as much as $100 billion over the next decade. Which drugs Medicare and patients will save on, however, remains a bit of a mystery

A cap on out-of-pocket drug prices

The bill limits how much money Medicare recipients must use for medications but, again, it will take some time for those rules to take hold.

In 2024, Medicare will get rid of a 5% coinsurance required of patients who have met the catastrophic threshold, which is currently set at $7,050 for out-of-pocket costs for drugs. Nearly 3 million Medicare patients met that threshold at some point from 2015 to 2019, according to a study by the Kaiser Family Foundation.

The following year, out-ofpocket drug costs will be capped at $2,000 for Medicare Part D, which typically covers at-home prescription medications

How will prices be controlled until then?

The Inflation Reduction Act has a series of controls aimed at immediately blunting the rising cost of drugs for Medicare. The bill caps because the secretary is copayments for insulin at $35 establishing a whole new proper month beginning in January, but for Medicare beneficiaries only. A $35-per-month limit on out-of-pocket costs for those on private health insurance was cut.

Ukraine, Russia trade more blame on nuke plant threats

KYIV, Ukraine — Fears about the potential for a radiation leak at Europe's largest nuclear power plant persisted Saturday as both sides traded blame for nearby shelling. Ukraine said Russian forces fired on areas just across the river from the plant and Russia claimed Ukrainian shells hit a building where nuclear fuel is stored.

Flash floods triggered by heavy monsoon rains across much of Pakistan have killed nearly 1,000 people and injured and displaced thousands more since mid-June, officials said Saturday.

The new death toll came a day after Prime Minister Shahbaz Sharif asked for international help in battling deadly flood damage in the impoverished Islamic nation.

The monsoon season, which began earlier than normal this year, has lashed Pakistan with particularly heavy rains and rescuers have struggled to evacuate thousands of marooned people from flood-hit areas.

No deal on treaty to protect sea life

Diplomats from around the world have failed to reach agreement on a United Nations treaty designed to protect marine life on the high seas, after a fifth round of talks ended in impasse.

Negotiations at U.N. headquarters in New York were suspended early Saturday following two weeks of talks that environmentalists had hoped would close a gap in international marine protection measures.

A proposed treaty would set rules for protecting biodiversity in two-thirds of the world's ocean areas that are outside of national jurisdictions. Less than 1% of the high seas are protected without a new treaty.

Police arrest teen in fatal shooting

Authorities arrested a Black Creek Twp. teenager who they say fatally shot a 17-year-old female in the head early Saturday, state police at Hazleton said.

The victim, who was not identified by state police or other investigating agencies, died Saturday morning at Lehigh Valley Hospital-Hazleton, troopers said. Alan Jay Meyers, 17, was charged as an adult with criminal homicide, possession of firearms by a minor and tampering with evidence, police said. He was arraigned, denied bail and jailed at Luzerne County Correctional Facility.

Staff and students at Hazleton Area High School were mourning the loss of a student and cheerleader.

Superintendent Brian Uplinger said district staff and counselors met with cheerleaders on Saturday afternoon after officials learned about her death.

Uplinger declined to release any other details that would identify the student, including the grade she attended or circumstances involving the death.

Republican gubernatorial nominee Doug Mastriano, three years before retiring from the Army, posed in a Confederate uniform for a faculty photo at the Army War College.

Mastriano in the uniform in a 2013-14 portrait for the Department of Military Strategy, Plans and Operations, where he worked until he retired in 2017. Reuters said it was told that faculty at the time were given the option of dressing as a historical figure, and while a few did so, only Mastriano is shown wearing a Confederate uniform.

The Army War College said in a statement that a team in 2020 had reviewed all art, text and images displayed at the Carlisle barracks for alignment with Army values and the college's educational philosophies, but it missed the faculty photo, which "has since been removed because it does not meet AWC values."

Mastriano, a state senator, did not immediately respond to requests for comment.

The telescope also picks up Jupiter's faint rings, which are only one-millionth the brightness of Jupiter itself, against a backdrop of even fainter and farther galaxies. Bright auroras at the planet's North and South Poles produce a crowning haze of light.

The new observations, she added, "will allow us to study the interplay of dynamics, chemistry and temperature structure in and above the Great Red Spot and the auroral regions."

> What I got wrong was that I overlooked how big the telescope was. Yes, its infrared capability gives it an edge in seeing galaxies so far away and back in time. But in addition to that, meters in diameter, dwarfs any other telescope in space and most on the ground, rendering it 10 times as powerful as the Hubble, allowing it to pull in fainter and fainter galaxies from all epochs of cosmic time — from here to almost infinity.

> Underscoring this cosmic reach was another spectacle that The Cosmic Evolution Early Release Science Survey, a team of astronomers led by Steven L. Finkelstein of the University of Texas at Austin, released last week. It is the result of 690 images of a patch of sky about one-tenth the size of a full moon, according to Finkelstein. Combined, they are the equivalent of 13.5 billion years of history.

How many straws do you need to take in a universe? Even a single straw is a porthole into the mystery of existence. It is full of galaxies — 30,000 of them, according to Finkelstein — in all shapes, sizes and colors, strung out in time and space islands of creation where something might have happened or is happening now in remote lonely splendor.

By zooming in on the survey image, you can sail through this space as if you are on the spaceship that Carl Sagan traveled in on the show "Cosmos."

The deeper you go, the more you see: So many clouds of stars, lonely magistrates of mystery. Some of these galaxies, it has been suggested but not yet confirmed, date from the earliest days of the luminous universe, when the fog of the Big Bang was lifting 200 million or 300 million years after it flicked on the switch of existence.

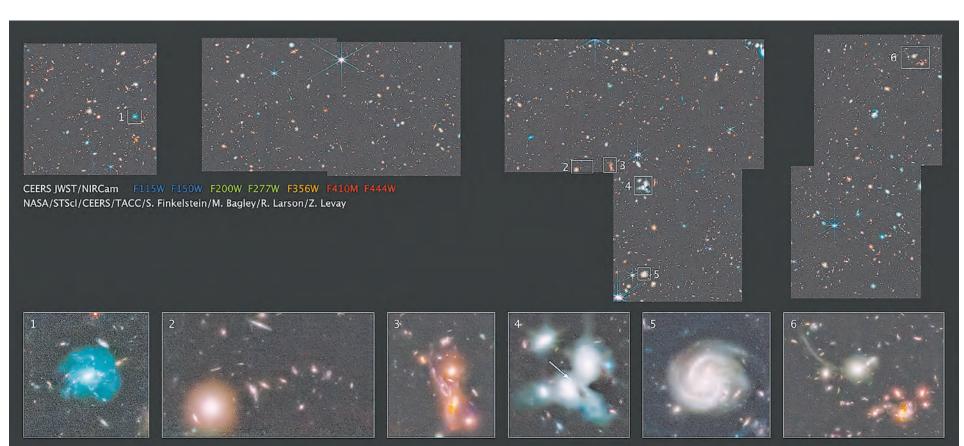

Whatever happens or happened in these galaxies or any other pinwheeled wonders, I suspect, stays there, lost in space and within the limits of our imagination. Looking through Webb's new void, I was overwhelmed by trying to imagine what forms life and matter might take out there. Could we ever know or even imagine what is possible in the cosmological horn of plenty depicted in the Webb images?

I haven't been so entranced with a view of the heavens for a long time. I remember when I was a teenager shivering with my friends around a dwindling campfire high in the Cascade Mountains in Washington one crystal clear night, debating the fate of the universe. The stars, so bright, were like a revelation to a cloudbound youth. I spent hours staring up at the stars, striving for some sort of visceral experience of how far they were. But you can't measure your stride against a light-year, let alone a million or billion of them. It broke my imagination.

Now it's been broken again.

DENNIS OVERBYE graduated from MIT with a physics degree and worked as a writer and editor at Sky and Telescope and Discover magazines before joining The New York Times in 1998 as deputy science editor. Pope expands ranks of potential successors Twenty men are elevated to cardinal in Vatican ceremony.

BY FRANCES D'EMILIO ASSOCIATED PRESS

VATICAN CITY — Pope Francis elevated 20 more churchmen to the rank of cardinal on Saturday, formally expanding those now eligible to vote for his successor in case he dies or resigns — the latter a step he has said he'd consider if the need arises.

Of the churchmen being named new cardinals in the consistory ceremony in St. Peter's Basilica, 16 are younger than 80 and thus eligible to participate in a conclave — the ritual-shrouded, locked-door assembly of cardinals who cast paper ballots to elect a new pontiff.

The 85-year-old Francis has now named 83 of the 132 cardinals currently young enough to join a conclave. The others were appointed by the previous two popes. St. John Paul II and Benedict XVI, whose unexpected retirement in 2013 paved the way for Francis to be elected.

With the eight batches of cardinals Francis has named, prospects are boosted that whoever becomes the next pontiff will share his vision for the future of the church.

Francis reminded the cardinals of their mission, which he said includes "an openness to all peoples, to the horizons of the world, to the peripheries as yet unknown."

Underlining Francis' attention to those on society's margins, among the new cardinals is Archbishop Anthony Poola of Hyderabad, India. The prelate, 60, is the first member of the Dalit community, considered the lowest rung of India's caste system, to become a cardinal.

While staunchly against abortion as a grave sin, Francis has also decried what he calls the weaponiza-

The Biden administration said about 70,000 sites were prepared to vaccinate people this fall. Although 60% of those are pharmacies, they also include doctor's offices, community health centers and rural health clinics.

States can also seek money from the Federal Emergency Management Agency for certain vaccination-related expenses, such as setting up sites, buying equipment and offering translation or transportation services.

Having shifted much of the rollout to private sites, though, states have been promised FEMA reimbursements on a relatively modest $550 million in vaccination spending so far this year. Last year, that figure was $8.5

And although providers are supposed to vaccinate everyone free, with or without insurance, the federal government ran out of money this past spring to offer reimbursements for shots for uninsured people, making it more difficult for them to receive boosters.

STATE COLLEGE

ere's how it has started out in Happy Valley, for far too many years now: Head coach James Franklin sits at a podium in early August, a few days into practice, and boasts about how "This is the year" the offensive line becomes what he has always thought it could be.

Then September hits, and before long, it becomes obvious those strides haven't been taken. The running game, talented as the running backs themselves might be, sits somewhere between inconsistent and ineffective. The quarterback, good as he is when he's healthy and gritty as he is in the face of a challenge, gets banged up to the brink of ineffectiveness by the time Halloween sets in.

A predictable follow-up from there is fans wondering how this all fell apart again, with all that talent on offense. To which, the answer is clear. It doesn't matter how talented your skill position players are. You're staring down .500 when you play in the Big Ten and block like you belong in the Sun Belt.

It's only slightly different at the dawn of the 2022 season. They have just about the most experienced quarterback in the nation, depth and talent at the receiver and tight end spots, and a gifted stable of running backs.

But when it comes to the offensive line, there have not been any braggadocios predictions of dominance coming from the head coach's podium.

Lackawanna Trail grad Roth's latest book goes beyond football

e was an influencer long before the social media term existed.

Former Division I football player, college football coach, world traveler, podcast host, New York Times bestselling author, Elite 11 quarterback camp host and coach and now-Pac-12 Network lead football analyst — Yogi Roth, has brought a little bit of all of his experiences, and those of many others, to his third book, "5-Star QB," a collection of the experiences as told by 54 quarterbacks who, at some point in their career, were a five-star recruit. It's available now on Amazon.

Roth, a Lackawanna Trail High School football standout who walked-on to play wide receiver for the University of Pittsburgh, teamed up with Joey Roberts, a 15-year NFL scouting veteran and current Elite 11 director of scouting, to pen a football book unlike any other.

"We decided we should create something to give back to the game," Roth said. "We create mentors in written form. We hit 54 quarterbacks who had worn the five-star ranking at some point in their careers. Whether it was a day or a week, like Cam Rising at Utah, or whether it was for their entire football life, like Josh Rosen, and everybody in between.

"We asked them all the same questions and got their answers. It was such a vulnerable

MYERS: Lessons in Roth's latest book go way beyond the game of football

example of who they are. I would get chills reading every one of their submissions that we curated. And when we were done with that, we said we're not done yet. We've got to give more advice. So I hit up the 40 most respected voices I know of, Joey knows of, in football, and asked if you can contribute to this book and write a letter to the parents of players and give them some advice.' Like a well-executed play, there are parts that make it work, for the budding recruit to the parents of a player to the average football fan.

Every chapter starts with a message on the topic — the scholarship, summer camps, recruiting trips, NIL, mental health, and many more — from what Roth calls ambassadors of football.

Names like UCLA's Chip Kelly, Arizona State's Herm Edwards, Ohio State's Ryan Day, former NFL QB Trent Dilfer, Stanford's David Shaw and even parents contributed responses, which start and end every chapter.

Between is a mix of Roth's personal experiences and views, as well as the responses to a series of 22 questions Roth and Roberts came up with for the five-star recruits.

"I've seen everybody," Roth, now 40, said. "When I was at USC, Tim Tebow came for a visit. Matt Leinart was there. I was around those guys. From that point, even with guys I played with in college, to now, the parents are asking the same questions. Now it's getting more intense because sixth-graders can get ranked now. Players in certain states can get NIL deals. Parents don't know how to navigate because there's no answer on Google, how to be the parent of a walk-on like me, or how to have a five-star recruit."

I'm not a guy who lives and dies with every snap each Saturday and Sunday, so it didn't seem like a book that would pique my interest. That thought disappeared mid-Chapter 1 when Matt Barkley explained his first scholarship recalled. "'Roth at the line, oneoffer. It came from the Colorado and-one, he missed the first free Buffaloes in 2006. He was sent a throw shot. Oh, lane violation. Buffalo-themed Monopoly board with the total fake money amounting to the value of his scholarship.

'Pretty cool, and still probably the best offer story I received ..., Barkley reveals in the book. So many of the stories are cool anecdotes of players, past and present. So, too, are the stories, some cautionary tales and others explaining some of the journey, from the parents, like the mother of NFL running back Christian McCaffrey and the dad of 2021 Heisman Trophy winner Bryce Young.

'There's something there for anybody at every stage of the journey," Roth said. "Whether you're the biggest recruit or you're at Lackawanna Trail as the only one who believes in you — I lived that experience. Or just a fan and you want to learn what these guys have gone through. I wanted to take the helmet off of these guys. I wanted the players to have a place to share their path. This book has become a palette for them."

There's also a stirring piece from Mark and Kym Hilinski, the parents of Washington State quarterback Tyler Hilinski, who committed suicide 19 days after his last college football game.

"I've talked to players after a poor performance or after they transfer and don't make it, I see them at their lowest," Roth said. "I've mentored a lot of these young men and I'm grateful for the relationships. When they quit or retire from football or transfer for the third time or when they come out of rehab, I get to talk to them. "A lot of pressure and anxiety and depression comes from not living up to somebody's expectations. I want fans to be able to take the helmet off and read what these guys went through." While it's about football, the lessons go way beyond the game. That's something Roth has tried to share in his career, the broadcasting part of which had its genesis in second grade. "I was a 7-year-old calling my own games in the backyard," Roth

Back at the line for one-and-one.' I remember that in Dalton."

These days, he sits alongside Hall of Fame broadcaster Ted Robinson at the 50-yard line at places like the L.A. Coliseum and the Rose Bowl. That's close to home for Roth and his wife Amy, and their two boys, Zayn, who's in second grade, and Makaiye, who

"It's been a beautiful journey for our collective," Roth said.

One that includes taking the boys with him on some trips.

"Last year I took them to Arizona-Arizona State and having them run on the field after the game reminded me of when I was at Trail and coaches Jeff and Scot Wasilchak had their kids running on the field at practices.

"I adored that moment and being like, 'Someday that'll be my kids.' I thought it would be as a coach but it's as a broadcaster."

Celebrity might be more like it. This is his third book. He coauthored "Win Forever" with Seattle Seahawks head coach Pete Carroll (who wrote the forward for 5-Star QB), when Roth was part of Carroll's coaching staff at Southern California. He has a children's book coming out in a few weeks, "Finding Free Fun."

"My dad taught me that phrase when I was a kid," Roth said. "Living in LA, it gets expensive to live in LA, but free fun is everywhere. We surf two or three days a week. We hike. We walk. We play I ask my kid, what are we doing right now? 'Free fun, dad. Free fun.' So, I wrote a book during the pandemic that centered on him."

He also will host a four-episode series on NBC starting Sept. 10. "Fixing Us" will focus on Type-2 diabetics and changing their lives through health and wellness.

"I'm kind of an encourager, I like to say."

More like a living lesson of what can happen when you believe in yourself.

Rosa took the first punt of the night to the end zone and followed that by picking off two passes. The Susquehanna offense did the rest, scoring four times in the first half and the defense was able to hold Holy Redeemer's spread formation in check as the Sabers opened the season with a 44-12 victory Saturday night at King's College in a three-hour nonleague marathon.

"That punt felt good because we really have been working hard in practice on punt return," Rosa said. "Honestly, I didn't even think I was going to be able to return it. It just felt good to score the first touchdown of the season."

It also was quite a debut by Susquehanna sophomore William Marcy. The young tailback reached the end zone on two of his first three touches, and finished with a game-high 80 yards untouched 66 yards for the on just seven carries.

Not only that, he also picked off a pass on defense and returned it 25 yards to the house to put the game away in the fourth quarter.

His 28-yard sweep not even one minute into the included a 98-yard drive second quarter gave that spanned seven plays-Susquehanna (1-0) an capped off by Marcy's first zone (Fisk kick), 6:11

18-point lead. He later crossed the goal line for the second time with 25 ticks left in the first half, boosting Susquehanna's halftime edge to three touch-

"Being my first varsity game, I was a little nervous," Marcy said. "I knew that I was going to be ready to go if they called my number. As soon as you get on the field, and you get that first hit, the nervousness kind of goes away."

Holy Redeemer (0-1) tried to claw back on an 81-yard strike from Jacob Hunter to Jake Griffin with two minutes left in the quarter. But two unanswered scores in the fourth — Layne Fisk's second touchdown of the night and Marcy's pick-six ended any hopes of a Royals comeback.

Susquehanna coach Kyle Cook's offense and special teams were clicking in the opening half.

After Holy Redeemer's first series resulted in a quick three-and-out, Rosa took the punt, hit the sideline and went nearly 7-0 lead not even three minutes into the season.

The offense was just as possessions resulted in touchdowns. One of those score of the night on a HR-Griffin 81 pass from Hunter (kick 28-yard sweep.

"That first touchdown felt great. Every nerve that I had was gone after that point," Marcy said. "Everything felt so right from that point. Everything felt normal to me."

Holy Redeemer, outside of Hunter at quarterback, couldn't really get into a groove in the opening half.

Hunter ran for 81 yards, including the Royals' lone score of the half on a designed 31-yard keeper directly through the heart of the Susquehanna line with 2:24 left in the second quarter. He accounted for 135 of Redeemer's 158 yards in the first half.

The Royals played part of the second half without star receiver Zach Perta, who sustained an injury.

"Our defense played really well. I think everyone had a really nice night," Rosa said. "We were a little nervous coming in because we knew they had a nice quarterback and some strong receivers. We were the underdogs, but we were able to put it all together."

SOUTH WILLIAMSPORT — Cohen Sakamoto hadn't allowed a run in the entire Little League World Series. But in the fourth inning of a Little League World Series semifinal Saturday, a run was in and there was a baserunner on second with just one out.

Sakamoto wasn't worried. He struck out the next two batters and Hawaii was cruising again, on its way to a 5-1 win over Tennessee and a spot Sunday in the LLWS championship.

"I didn't feel any pressure because I knew I had a great defense behind me," Sakamoto said. "Even if I didn't, I knew someone was going to pick me up."

Sakamoto finished with seven strikeouts and Ruston Hiyoto hit a two-run homer to put the game out of reach, making Hawaii the winners of U.S. bracket. The Honolulu team will play Curaçao, 1-0 winners over Taiwan in the international bracket earlier

Sakamoto's stats, like his club's, have been stellar throughout the 20-team tournament. In 13²/₃ innings he struck out 24 batters and the two hits he gave up Saturday were the only ones he try to match the teams from 2005, much rather not like them, and

LITTLE LEAGUE CHAMPIONSHIP AT A GLANCE

HOW THEY GOT HERE

Hawaii has yet to lose a game in the expanded, 20-team tournament, entering Sunday with a 5-0 record. None of the games has been close. It was a 13-0 rout over Tennessee that advanced Hawaii to the game to represent the United States in the tournament final. Hawaii once agaın took down Tennessee with a 5-1 win to move to Sunday's championship.

Curação has had a much longer road to the championship. After beating Nicaragua, 2-0, to open the tournament, Curação fell, 9-3, to Panama to drop out of the winners' side of the international bracket.

Since then, Curação has had to win five straight to make its way to the championship. The Caribbean team beat Italy, Canada, Nicaragua and Mexico to reach the international final, then defeated unbeaten Taiwan, 1-0, to advance to the LLWS championship.

PLAYERS TO WATCH

For Hawaii, Jaron Lancaster has been one of its stars. He tossed three innings of no-hit ball against New York and at the plate, he is hitting over .500 with a couple home runs. He is eligible to pitch in Sunday's championship.

Cohen Sakamoto was excellent as the starter on Saturday against Tennessee, throwing 4½ innings of one-run ball. At the plate, he has been nearly unstoppable and has also hit two home runs.

Davey-Jay Rijke has been Curação's on-field leader. He struck out 15 batters in Curação's 7-2 win over Nicaragua. Even though he was hitless Saturday, Rijke had a remarkable catch in the sixth inning against Taiwan in center field to preserve that 1-0

In that same game, Jaydion Louisa came off the bench with a go-ahead single to give Curação its lone run. Louisa will be a bat to watch whether it's in the starting lineup or off the bench Decaster was "perfect," Curaçao manager Zaino Everett said.

"He kept the ball down and threw good curveballs because they have good bats," Everett said. "A good inside-and-outside mix helped him get outs."

Decaster got some help as he worked out of a first inning jam, thanks to a flyout and a groundout with Liao Yuan-Shu on third. In the fourth, left fielder Jaythan Cordilia ran down and snagged a fly ball that was tailing away to the corner. Afterward, he got a hug from center fielder Davey-Jay Rijke for his effort.

In the fifth, Taiwan loaded the bases on singles by Wu Hsuan-Hung, Hsu Ta-Sheng and Liao Yuan-Shu, which ended Reangelo's day as he surpassed the 85-pitch limit for Little League. Qshondrickson Doran came in with two outs to face Tseng Yi-Che and got him to fly out to left.

Cameras useful, but still good to get out on trails or deer hunters, scouting has become a lot easier in the last 20 years. With the invention of the trail cameras, many hunters have become completely dependent on them to do their scouting.

While I must admit that I, too, have become a trail camera junkie, I still get out there every chance I get to see where the deer are feeding and what foods are available in the area I plan to hunt.

Just because the area you want to hunt had tons of acorns the deer fed on last. year, it doesn't mean that there will be any appreciable amount this year. Unless you get out there and do some leg work, there could be an area that has tons of white acorns 100 yards from where your red acorns are having a bad year.

Where are the deer bedding? What trails are they using to get to their food source? For archers especially, a hot trail 20 yards over from the one you are watching could be disastrous.

Once you have decided on an area the deer are using heavily, the trail cameras are now an important tool in your scouting.

Now, there are cameras you can check from the comfort of your favorite chair. All you need is a smart phone and you can check your camera any time vou choose. While they're great, don't let them reduce the time you spend in the woods.

If you have a camera that is giving you hundreds of pictures a week, but they are at night, don't expect the pattern to change. I still keep that camera going to give me an idea of the quality of the deer that are in that area.

Set up a camera on another trail close to the food source the deer are using in that area until you find the trail they are using during legal shooting time. If you find a food source such as a corn field, setting up a camera there is useful to see what deer are using it, but where do you set up your blind? The trails they are using to get to that field is where you should set up your cameras. You might find three or more trails leading into a food source. You should set up a camera on every trail, because the best buck might be using just one trail. If you only observe one trail, you could be watching a lesser buck while that huge eight- or 10-point monster is coming into the field 30 yards away.

I always set up the cameras to give me all the information they can offer. This way, I can go to every camera and iust change the cards, then check them when I find time at home. When I put the card into the computer, it tells me what camera took the picture and what time of day it took it. If a camera shows that the deer are coming through with only 10 minutes of legal shooting hours left, move the camera closer to the bedding areas to make sure you can get a shot if they alter their pattern when the season opens.

While getting those close-up shots are nice, I always set my cameras a little farther from the trail, so the deer don't hear the camera or see the light and change their pattern. To tell the truth, I worry more about the bears in the area. I have lost more than one camera to a bear that chooses to use them as chew toys.

Another word of advice: Don't face the cameras into the east or west. When the sun is rising or setting, it will hinder the picture.

These cameras can be a great tool if used with a liberal dose of in-person scouting. DAVID LEWONCZYK is an outdoors correspondent for

THAT'S A WIN; THAT'S A LOSS

Game-by-game breakdown of what Penn State faces this season

Penn State is the most difficult program in the Big Ten to gauge. On talent alone, it has a shot at a championship game berth if it can figure out a way to get over the hump against Ohio State at home. But the Nittany Lions were talented the last two seasons, too, and played .500 ball. To picture them getting to another New Year's Six bowl, you have to believe in some things you haven't seen in a while. Like, better offensive line play. Like, QB Sean Clifford staying healthy, or someone behind him being ready if that can't happen. New defensive coordinator Manny Diaz should get this group playing at a high level. But the offensive inconsistencies are enough to make one wonder whether the 9-3 record and NY6 bowl berth that seem imminently doable are going to be attained.

RECORD: 9-3 BOWL GAME: Orange Bowl

SEPT. 1 • AT PURDUE

Ross-Ade Stadium has been a tricky venue for the Big Ten's top-tier programs since head coach Jeff Brohm took over the Boilermakers, and this year's team has the potential to be Purdue's most high-powered under his direction. The Nittany Lions haven't lost there since 2003. though, and they're used to opening on the road. This is a good early test for new defensive coordinator Manny Diaz.

PICK: Win

SEPT. 10 • VS. OHIO

The Bobcats return just four starters from their 2021 offense, which might be just fine for them. Ohio ranked 105th in the nation in scoring offense and 108th in passing yards per game (184.1) last season, and it resulted in a 3-9 record, their worst since 2003. Lions might be reminded of the last time Ohio came to Happy Valley. though. The Bobcats overpowered them, 24-14, in the 2012 opener, the first game of the Bill O'Brien era.

PICK: Win

SEPT. 17 • AT AUBURN

Penn State's first venture into SEC territory since it went to Alabama in 2010, the Nittany Lions are looking to sweep the home-and-home series against a team that played them tough at Beaver Stadium a year ago. The Tigers bring seven starters back from a unit that allowed just 21.8 ppg last season. The Lions will have to find a way to slow RB Tank Bigsby, who ran for 102 yards and two scores against them.

PICK: Loss

SEPT. 24 • VS. CENTRAL MICHIGAN

A rare season when Penn State will face two MAC foes, and this one will be a stiffer challenge. Seven starters are back on offense for head coach Jim McElwain's team. which won nine games and the Sun Bowl against Washington State last season. The Lions will have a second consecutive tough task against the run, taking on sophomore Lew Nichols III, who led the nation with 1,848 rushing yards in 2021.

PICK: Win

OCT. 1 • VS. NORTHWESTERN

These are lean times for head coach Pat Fitzgerald's Wildcats, who played for the Big Ten championship in 2020 before stumbling to a 1-8 conference record in 2021. Penn State has lost two of its last three games against the Wildcats dating back to 2014, but Northwestern has struggled at the skill positions, were bad in the trenches, and scored two touchdowns or less in seven of their last eight games.

PICK: Win

OCT. 15 • AT MICHIGAN

The Lions were a play or two away from upending the playoff-bound Wolverines at Beaver Stadium in 2021, and this series has been tightly contested in recent years. Defensively, coach Jim Harbaugh's team is more talented than it is experienced, and that may be a factor, considering how many close wins this group had last season. The Lions have won three of four, and were victorious in their last trip to the Big House.

PICK: Win

OCT. 22 • VS. MINNESOTA

A strategically placed White Out at Beaver Stadium for Penn State, the week after Michigan and the one before Ohio State. The atmosphere usually peps up the Nittany Lions, but the Gophers always seem to have their number. They're exactly the style of team that has given James Franklin's teams fits: Experienced at the skill positions, big up front, and a defense that can turn the ball over. If they embrace the atmosphere, the Gophers can be tough.

PICK: Loss

OCT. 29 • VS. OHIO STATE

It has been six years since the trademark win of Franklin's head coaching tenure, and that 2016 victory over the Buckeyes is the only one Penn State has against the East Division favorite in their last 10 meetings. Still, two of the four losses at Beaver Stadium in that stretch have been by a field goal or less. With QB C.J. Stroud, RB TreVeyon Henderson and WR Jaxon Smith-Njigba back, the Buckeyes might have the nation's most explosive offense.

PICK: Loss

NOV. 5 • AT INDIANA

The Hoosiers finished outside of the top 100 in the nation last season in points scored (17.2 per game) and points allowed (33.2), which obviously isn't a good combination. Head coach Tom Allen once again hit the transfer portal hard, and Pac-12 transfers Myles Jackson (UCLA) and J.H. Tevis (California) are expected to bolster a weak pass rush. This is a program trying to piece it together, rather than build.

PICK: Win

NOV. 12 • VS. MARYLAND

The Terps have a history of wilting in the face of a Penn State challenge, but the Nittany Lions defense better come to play. The Terrapins could be scary offensively, and with Florida transfer Jacob Copeland joining returning starter Rakim Jarrett and Dontay Demus Jr. in the receiving corps, QB Taulia Tagovailoa has maybe the deepest corps of receivers in the division outside of Ohio State. They'll be a fun team to watch.

PICK: Win

NOV. 19 • AT RUTGERS

Year three of the Greg Schiano return to the Scarlet Knights' sidelines is expected to bring much of the same as the first two. Just another season into a long, long rebuild. The Knights are going to be gritty, but they're replacing all but one starter in the front seven on a defense that was their strength last season. What shape thev'll be in come the weekend before Thanksgiving remains to be seen.

PICK: Win

NOV. 26 • VS. MICHIGAN STATE

Sparty was an afterthought at this point a year ago, then went 11-2 largely by rebuilding its program through the transfer portal. By the time they roll into Happy Valley for the season finale, we'll know if that kind of success is sustainable for a second season. They'll need to replace Heisman candidate RB Kenneth Walker III, and they addressed their leaky pass defense by adding transfer corner Ameer Speed. But they didn't address their pass rush.

PICK: Win

For Elsdon, chance of a lifetime in reach

BY DONNIE COLLINS STAFF WRITER

SUNDAY, AUGUST 28, 2022

STATE COLLEGE — Tyler Elsdon grew up in the Coal Region, dreaming of chances like this.

He never saw guys like Dan Connor or Paul Posluszny stuff opposing running backs for Penn State for years of fall Saturdays, but somehow, he felt a kinship with them. Some way, he was going to join them. Someday, he would count himself among their ranks.

For the sophomore linebacker, that involves more than just wearing the uniform and standing on the sideline. This year, he finally has a chance to officially be part of Linebacker U.

Even a Penn State defense, expected by many to be among the Big Ten's best this season, has its own question mark. It lies at the middle linebacker spot, where Elsdon is among the candidates competing to replace twoyear starter Ellis Brooks at one of the most historic positions on the field for the Nittany Lions.

Never mind one of the most

"It means a lot to me," the former North Schuylkill High School star said. "It's LBU. I'm from PA. It's in your DNA, playing this position. But I'm not necessarily satisfied with just the opportunity.'

There aren't many obvious opportunities to pick up a starting job on this defense.

Starters return at two spots up front, the middle of the defensive line is loaded with experience, and all four starters in the secondary from Penn State's Outback Bowl loss to Arkansas on Jan. 1 are expected to be on the field eight months later, when it opens the 2022 season at Purdue. But Brooks and Jesse Luketa took the bulk of the snaps at middle linebacker last season, leaving Penn State to dip into its younger depth to fill the void.

While true freshmen Abdul Carter and Keon Wylie were seeing snaps there in camp, the competition seems to have come down to the two backups who played sparingly in 2021: Elsdon and redshirt freshman Kobe King.

It's a matchup new defensive nant, but the one who best undercoordinator Manny Diaz has watched closely.

He calls the middle linebacker in the world, run a 4.3 and bench "the quarterback of the defense," pointing out the responsibilities if you don't know whether to be that player has in getting the rest in the A-gap or the B-gap, the of the defense into the right call, whole defense falls apart," Diaz feel it's made both of us better." and knowing the tendencies of said. "It's about who can do that the opposing offense. Which most consistently." means, the winner of the competition might not be the player who is the most physically domi- of brilliance.

COLLINS: Any title hopes rest on offensive line's improvement

"I'm not going to sit here and pound the table about 'This is the year,' because that hasn't necessarily played out in that way the last couple of years," Franklin said. "I'm going to take a more measured approach there and let them, and let us, prove that to you along the offensive line."

There's a quiet confidence this season could be different, and it's wrapped in the realization beaten into this program since the start of 2020 that it better be.

Is that warranted? Where does it come from? And what does "quiet confidence" really matter at this point?

They're asking themselves those same questions.

"I'll say this," middle linebacker Tyler Elsdon said, "being on the defensive side of the ball and going against them for a limited time in camp and even going back to the spring, they have a chip on their shoulder. They have a lot to prove, and they've worked their butts off to prove it. They are the hardest-working group on the team, for sure."

Penn State used to build championship contenders on the backs of their offensive line, but those days are long in the past.

The Nittany Lions have not had a first-team all-Big Ten offensive lineman during Franklin's tenure as head coach; Maryland, Nebraska, Rutgers and Purdue are the only other teams in the conference who have not had one in that stretch. They haven't had a first-team All-American since Joe Paterno was head coach.

Yet ..."Why can't we win championships?" the Penn State fan still asks.

What might be the best sign for cautious optimism up front for Penn State is that the players tasked with making 2022 "the year" don't seem to know quite how to answer those questions either outside of accepting reality, and the spotlight that goes along with it.

"It's such a common analogy that the O-line is the engine of the offense, and I stand by that. I stand by that to this day and forever," sophomore left tackle Olu Fashanu said. "If the O-line has a bad day, generally the offense has a bad day. So we like to think that everything

"We like to put that type of pressure on ourselves, because we know that when relies on us.

stuff goes under pressure, that's when we need to really perform."

The one thing Penn State has going for it up front that might portend something bigger and better this season is a somewhat different look than it has had in the past. A 6-foot-6, 321-pounder with quick feet and a mean streak on the field, Fashanu is looking to build off a solid starting debut in the Outback Bowl loss to Arkansas on Jan. 1. He'll take over for longtime starter Rasheed rity anymore.

side. He was a consensus four-star prospect coming out of high school, and the man who will stand alongside him at left guard, 6-foot-6, 332-pound redshirt freshman Landon Tengwall, was one of the top offensive line recruits in the country a season ago, a rugged, bruising run blocker who Penn State played more and more as the 2021 season went along.

Technically, this line is built around its two returning seniors: Center Juice Scruggs, who may have been the best player the Nittany Lions had up front even as he played slightly out of position at right guard, and massive right tackle Caedan Wallace. But the hope the coaches seem to have in this unit lies in the relative unknown: How will the sheer talent of Fashanu, Tengwall and junior right guard Sal Wormley, who missed all of 2021 with an injury, change the direction Penn State wants to take on offense? They've had talent up front before. They've had four-star prospects, a fivestar or two, as well. But at least at the outset, this group is measuring itself less in stars than it is in a shared desire not to accept medioc-Fashanu said that has extended into the weight room, where new strength coach Chuck Losey has challenged the group in a way they say they've never been challenged before. And, any success off that has bred something Penn State simply hasn't had in years.

"If you go around and ask these guys, there's a little bit more of a swagger to the O-line right now," Tengwall said. "It has just kind of given everybody on the team a little bit of confidence. I'm going around the locker room and talking to guys and it's like, 'Wow, you guys are looking good, man.' It's getting everybody kind of amped up. It's getting me excited that guys are seeing The real excitement will come if the offensive line looks good when it matters most. On the field. With Ohio State or Michigan or Michigan State defenders staring back at them. Until then, you're a question mark until your not.

This team will go as far as the offensive line can take it. They know it. The real question is whether they can do anything about it.

Bills release punter Araiza amid allegation

Lawsuit claims the rookie and two college teammates gang-raped a teenager last fall.

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. -In the face of major public backlash and internal questions over the decision to award Matt Araiza the punting job, the Buffalo Bills reversed course by cutting the rookie Saturday, two days after a lawsuit was filed alleging the player and two colteenager last fall.

"The last 48 hours have been very difficult for a lot of people. It's been tough. And you know, we sympathize

"But at this time, we just think it's the best move for lege teammates gang-raped a everyone to move on from Matt and let him take care of this situation and focus on that. So, we're gonna part ways there," Beane added.

Beane said the Bills were

The decision to cut ties with their sixth-round draft pick out of San Diego State comes after Buffalo cleared the way for Araiza to take over the punting duties by releasing returning veteran Matt Haack on Monday.

The Bills opted then to keep Araiza even while being aware of the allegations made against him since late July. The team then stood by the player by announcing it "conducted a thorough examination" into the matter a day after the lawsuit was filed.

Beane said the team did as much as it could in getting as many details as possible,

'You want to give everyone as much due process as you can. Again, we're not a judge and a jury," Beane said.

McDermott then interjected by saying the team did consider the victim's version of events as contained in the lawsuit. 'We did take those very McDermott made the call to hold out Araiza from playing against Carolina. The player watched the game from an undisclosed location while also issuing a statement through his agent, Joe Linta, which read: "The facts of the incident are not what they are portrayed in the lawsuit or in the press. I look forward to quickly setting the record straight.'

A lawsuit filed in San Diego County Superior Court accused Araiza and two teammates of raping a then-17-year-old girl at a Halloween party at an off-campus home where Araiza had been living. A San Diego police investigation has been turned over to the district attorney's office to determine whether to pursue charges. DA spokeswoman Tanya Sierra said Friday there was no timeline as to how long a decision will take.

DUBLIN — Scott Frost isn't calling plays on offense this season.

However, the embattled Nebraska coach still made the biggest decision in Saturday's 31-28 loss to Northwestern in Ireland.

He ordered an onside kick and it didn't work. Now, he's facing even more pressure with Nebraska's losing streak at seven games.

'You've got to win in this business to keep your job," said Frost, who is in his fifth year at the helm. "That's the way it is. I love the state of Nebraska. I love these fans that sacrificed to come over here. We've got to get this turned around."

Ryan Hilinski threw for 314 yards and two touchdowns to help Northwestern rally to a victory in the season opener before 42,699 fans at Aviva Stadium in the Irish capital.

Frost took the blame for a failed onside kick that changed the momentum of the game in the third quarter.

"I made that call so that's on me," Frost said of the decision after the Huskers took a 28-17 lead. "At that point in the game, I thought all the momentum was on our side. I thought if we got it, we could end the game.

"You can't really foresee them scoring 14 straight and us sputtering after we played well to start the second half on offense. Again those are excuses. If I had (to do) it over, I wouldn't make the call."

The Wildcats finished with 528 yards and gained a measure of revenge after their humiliating, 56-7 loss to the Huskers last October. plays later, Evan Hull ran it in from the Nebraska hasn't won since then.

Epicenter rocks Travers

Favorite romps at Saratoga.

BY JOHN KEKIS

ASSOCIATED PRESS SARATOGA SPRINGS, — If there were any questions about Epicenter after his runner-up finishes in the first two legs of the Triple Crown, they've likely disappeared.

The favorite Saturday for the 153rd running of the $1.25 million Travers Stakes at Saratoga Race Course, Epicenter left his rivals in his dusty wake with a riveting stretch run, beating Cyberknife by 51/4 lengths for his first Grade 1 triumph.

"He looked like he was going one speed and then he kept building and building and building and I felt pretty good turning for home," ga meet. "He had a helluva nice closing speed.'

Epicenter, runner-up in the Kentucky Derby and Preakness, covered the 11/4 miles in 2 minutes, 0.72 seconds and paid $4.00 to win, $2.80 to place and $2.30 for show. Cyberknife paid $4.10 and $3.30, and Zandon was $2.90 to show.

It was the second stakes victory for Epicenter at Saratoga in a month.

"It looked like he had a chance to show who he was and I believe that he did." said trainer Steve Asmussen, who won the Travers for the first time. "I thought that answered a lot of questions. For Epicenter to have competed in the Derby, in the Preakness and still have this jockey Joel Rosario said much horse now, we're after his record 12th graded extremely proud of that. His stakes victory of the Sarato- résumé looks very good and the Travers for the first time.

Epicenter was fourth and began to close on leader Cyberknife as the field neared the top of the stretch, then took control.

"You could tell he was getting away from us a little bit," Cyberknife's trainer Brad Cox said. "He's a very good horse."

The eight-horse field was stacked with Preakness winner Early Voting and Haskell winner Cyberknife, who set the early pace. Chad Brown, leading trainer at Saratoga with 34 wins entering the day, saddled three horses -Early Voting, Zandon, and Artorius — in his bid to win Four players, however, removed their names from the complaint.

Saudi-funded LIV Golf has joined the antitrust lawsuit against the PGA Tour in an amended complaint in which four players have removed their names.

That leaves seven players, most notably Phil Mickelson and Bryson DeChambeau, along with LIV Golf as plaintiffs in the lawsuit. The four who withdrew their names are Carlos Ortiz, Abraham Ancer, Pat Perez and Jason Kokrak.

LIV Golf has offered several big names signing fees that are reported to be worth $150 million or more, in addition to the $25 million in prize money at each event. LIV Golf has staged three tournaments so far. The fourth is next weekend outside Boston.

The amended complaint says while LIV Golf has launched its tour despite "supracompetitive costs" and reduced access to players, "facing headwinds of this nature is not sustain-

ATLANTA — Justin Thomas was a tap-in away from polishing off a 7-under 63. And then the horn sounded Saturday signaling a stop in play because of storms near the Tour Championship.

He had to wait until Sunday to not only finish, but to figure out where it left him in pursuit of the FedEx Cup and its $18 million prize.

Scottie Scheffler was still in the lead, barely. Xander Schauffele was still on his heels, even tying him ever so briefly. They were on the 13th hole and among 10 players who have to return Sunday morning for what could be a sprint toward a pile of cash.

Scheffler was at 19-under par, even par for the round on a hot, steamy day at East Lake with soft green and very little wind, always the recipe for low scoring.

Schauffele was 1 under for for a wild round of back-to-back birdies, back-toback bogevs and back-to-back birdies during a six-hole stretch on the front nine.

Dupont native Brandon Matthews brought new meaning to the phrase up-and-down in Saturday's third round of the Nationwide Children's Hospital Championship in Columbus, Ohio.

After an even-par front nine, the 28-year-old made just two pars on the back nine, a seesaw adventure than saw him make four birdies and three bogeys en route to a 1-under 70.

For the second of three events in the Korn Ferry Tour playoffs, Matthews is tied for 52nd, 3-under par and 11 behind leader David Lingmerth.

The third round was scheduled to finish an hour later, and then lightning in the area stopped play for an hour. And when the second batch of lightning arrived in the area, there was no chance to finish.

Hideki Matsuyama posted the low round of the day at 63, and he was still six shots behind.

Scheffler started Thursday at 10-under par and with a two-shot lead as the No. 1 seed in the FedEx Cup, with Cantlay two shots behind. Scheffler, already a four-time winner and a lock to be voted PGA Tour player of the year, opened with rounds of 65-66 and at times has threatened to turn the Tour Championship into a runawav.

He stalled Saturday, and all that did was expand the possibilities.

British Open champion Cameron Smith is a three-time winner and would have needed to win to make it a race for player of the year. He had a 68 and was 11 shots behind amid another round of

FDA's new hearing aid rule won't fix bigger problems

BY JAIPREET VIRDI

THE WASHINGTON POST

On Aug. 16, the Food and Drug Administration issued a final rule creating a new category of over-the-counter hearing aids, which will take effect as soon as mid-October.

Under this rule, adults with mild to moderate hearing loss can buy hearing aids without a prescription from any seller for approximately $600 to $800 a pair. That will save millions of Americans thousands of dollars. Traditional hearing aids average between $5,000 to upward of $14,000 a pair, including fitting and follow-up professional services. The FDA guidelines also ensure patient safety — like ensuring hearing aids aren't so loud they cause further damage to the ears — and other technical specifications to ensure good device performance.

Once OTC hearing aids hit the market, they will offer consumers affordable, accessible and technologically sophisticated options for improving hearing.

Yet, they won't benefit all Americans with hearing loss. Without proper exams and individualized fitting, OTC hearing aids won't target someone's specific hearing loss, which requires an evaluation and calibration for maximum sound benefits. Indeed, experts are advising consumers to consider getting a hearing assessment by a certified audiologist before purchasing a device. Moreover, since hearing aids are considered consumer products rather than essential medical devices, they are not covered by insurance.

In short, while these new devices offer great promise, they leave in place problems that have plagued Americans with hearing loss for over a half-century. While Congress has grappled with how to deal with the gap between the medical and consumer sides of hearing loss and high costs since the 1960s, legislators have taken no action. Absent fundamental legal changes, however, these flaws probably will linger.

Beginning in the 1920s, five companies controlled the market for hearing aids. Industry salesmen, not medical professionals, guided consumers' selections of devices with few guardrails to guarantee quality. Doctors regularly accused salesmen of encroaching on their territory, but the truth was that salesmen monopolized this space because most medical experts found the fitting of hearing aids to be time-consuming - and often unnecessary — for their practice.

This structure began to change in 1943, when the American Medical Association and the American

HOW DANGEROUS ARE RIGHT-WING EXTREMISTS?

While many would argue we have never seen this type of polarization, history shows we don't have to look too far

BY GREG SARGENT THE WASHINGTON POST

Consider the events of this month alone: Members of a militia in Michigan were convicted of a plot to kidnap the state's Democratic governor, Gretchen Whitmer. We've seen numerous threats and attempts at violent attacks against the FBI. And the Internal Revenue Service launched a new security review in response to threats of violence toward its workforce.

There is an unsettling historical fact associated with the IRS's security review: It is the first time the agency has seen the need for this since far-right domestic terrorist Timothy McVeigh bombed a government building in Oklahoma City in 1995, killing 168 people.

Threats of political violence appear to be rising. Donald Trump continues to treat his effort to incite the violent overthrow of the government as a righteous cause, and a large swath of his party is embracing him in that project.

What's more, with Trump under investigation for hoarding highly classified documents, escalating threats toward the FBI have done nothing to dissuade Republicans from throwing around virulently hyperbolic rhetoric about alleged federal law enforcement thuggery. And Republicans have launched a new wave of wild-eyed nonsense about the IRS amid still more threats.

In eerie ways, a good deal of this echoes the 1990s. And as luck would have it, Nicole Hemmer, a historian of the American right wing, is set to release "Partisans," a new book on the 1990s that traces many pathologies in our current politics back to that decade.

So I reached out to Hemmer to discuss the parallels between then and now. An edited and condensed version of our exchange follows.

al agents are rising.
I'm having bad flashbacks to the 1990s, Are you?

Nicole Hemmer: I am having those same flashbacks. The 1990s are a decade when militia activism in the United States and far-right violence were surging.

Sargent: Can we attempt a taxonomy of today's right wing? How do you define the different components?

Hemmer: You have a violent far right that believes the government is fully illegitimate, and that violence is the proper response to any kind of government action or presence: The Oregon wildlife refuge occupation, the attempts to kidnap Whitman

You have groups like Oath Keepers and Proud Boys, who are violent but also have clear political goals. And then you have a more mainstream rightwing political movement that has become more and more attracted to violence in recent years. Like Marjorie Taylor Greene. But also Donald Trump

In 2016, he was encouraging police brutality, encouraging people to beat up protesters. He was tapping into violence and giving it his stamp of approval. We see rising interest in violence over the course of his presidency.

Sargent: It seems to me today's climate is more similar to the 1990s than, say, to the Barack Obama years. The tea party was about racist backlash and Obamacare "death panels." But the enemies in the 1990s were globalists, federal agencies, law enforcement — just like today.

Hemmer: That shift back to the enemies of the 1990s — Donald Trump plays a pretty big role in bringing that language back and mainstreaming it.

Sargent: In a sense the 1990s created the politics of today.

Hemmer: You're right that the 1990s are the origin of a lot of these arguments. The militia movement itself really comes to the fore in the 1990s.

But things change. In the 1990s, the foreign country most in the sights of the far right was Japan, and now it's China. Now, you have social media and a kind of meme language that transfers over into mainstream politics. Language like "cuck" has become pretty familiar even though it used to belong to the fringes. The shift in media is really important.

Sargent: Doesn't Trump bring overt insurrectionism to the table?

Hemmer: In the 1990s, you

Hope for GOP rises in Colorado

DENVER — Late on election night, the nation's eyes might be on Colorado, with control of the U.S. Senate in 2023 hanging in the balance. Even if that Republican aspiration has been put out of reach by the party's selection of intellectually down-market Senate candidates in a slew of states, the GOP nominee here, Joe O'Dea, might have discovered the template for being an appealing Republican even and unaffiliated voters, who while much of the party grovels to someone appalling.

O'Dea, 60, challenges Sen. Michael Bennet, 57, a twoterm Democratic incumbent. Their contest underscores their parties' current profiles.

Bennet's father, whose familv arrived on the Mayflower, was a diplomat, senior State Department official for presidents Jimmy Carter and Bill Clinton, and president of National Public Radio. Bennet's mother survived the Holocaust, as did her parents. Bennet himself attended Washington's toney St. Albans law firm. In Denver, he Anschutz, was appointed city schools superintendent, then in 2009 was appointed to comwho joined President Barack Obama's Cabinet.

O'Dea, a fourth-generation Coloradan married to the granddaughter of Mexican immigrants, was adopted at birth into a Denver police officer's family. To help pay his Catholic school tuition, O'Dea washed dishes at a pizza restaurant until he was promoted to kneading the dough, which required him to rise, like the dough, at 2:30 a.m. Impatient to start a business — installing attic fans in houses without air conditioning from his basement, he left Colorado State University three credits short of graduation. His construction company now has 300 employees, 80% of them Hispanics, and specializes in large civil engineerenough to sink $2 million in his Senate campaign.

But the crucial financial contribution to his political campaign was the perhaps $10 million that Democrats spent trying to manipulate voters into nominating one of O'Dea's rivals in the Republican primary. Democrats spent that money on ads cynically attempting to help a firebreathing "stop the steal" state legislator who was at the U.S. Capitol on Jan. 6, 2021. The Democratic-funded ads labeled him "too conservative for Colorado," hoping to kindle conservatives' enthusiasm for him. And Democrats tried to wound O'Dea by praising him as a "moderate," an epithet among fans of the fire-breather.

The Democrats' attempt to stampede conservatives into supporting a weak generalelection candidate backfired. Colorado has open primaries, are 45% of Colorado's electorate, stampeded toward O'Dea. Now Democrats, having tried to stigmatize O'Dea as a moderate, must pivot to claiming he is MAGA extremist.

Inconveniently, O'Dea says he hopes Donald Trump does not run again. ("I don't want to see him as president.") He speaks reluctantly about social issues. Regarding abortion, he is about where a plurality of Americans seem to be: Allow the procedure early in pregnancy (92.7% now occur in the first 12 weeks), no elective late-term abortions, School and moved to Colorado no public funding, require after Yale Law School and a parental consent for minors' stint at a premier Washington abortions. And he says that if he had been a senator in 2010, became wealthy working for he would have voted to conbillionaire investor Philip firm Elena Kagan, Obama's last successful Supreme Court nominee. O'Dea was the only plete the term of a senator Republican primary to clearly say Joe Biden won the 2020

In the Senate, Bennet has consistently sought occasions for bipartisanship, and has occasionally been heterodox (e.g., he voted to override Obama's veto of the Keystone XL pipeline). He has, however, been orthodox on the higheststakes votes: He opposed confirmation to the Supreme Court of Coloradan Neil Gorsuch, as well as Brett Kavanaugh and Amy Coney Barrett. Bennet's intractable problem is Coloradans' 56% disapproval of Joe Biden, and their 80% agreement — up from 60% last summer — with the proposition that the nation is on the wrong track. Based on nationwide hemorrhaging of Hispanic support for Demoing projects. He has prospered crats, O'Dea hopes to get the support of 60% of the 22.3% (the seventh-largest percentage among the states) of Coloradans who are Hispanics. O'Dea's candidacy, in a purple state trending blue (Colorado has voted Republican in presidential politics only twice in this century's six elections), tests many Coloradans' professed disdain for both parties. If voters embrace his temperate conservatism, they will encourage Republicans elsewhere to emulate his independence from their most recent presidential candidate's whining about imagined 2020 grievances. So, Coloradans have the nation's political healing in their hands.

Debt relief initiative has upsides

Joe Biden announced a plan to reduce most students' debt by $10,000, with lower-income students eligible for twice that amount.

The debt forgiveness was one of eight candidates in the much less generous than many progressives wanted but more generous than many expected. Assuming it survives legal challenges, it will be a big deal for millions of Americans, although the overall economic impact will, be limited. There are two big questions about this plan. First, will it, as critics claim, significantly increase inflation? The answer if you do the math, is a clear no. Second, is it a good policy? The answer should be: Compared with what?

If you're worried about inflation, the relevant number here isn't the eventual cost to taxpayers, which might be several hundred billion dollars. It is, rather, the effect on private spending. I don't see any way to claim that this effect will be large.

Consider the fact that before the COVID-19 pandemic — that is, before the government paused required payments on federally held student-debt payments total receipts from the federal loan program were about $70 billion a year. Since most student debt is in the form of loans, much more than $10,000, these payments will be reduced by much less than that total. At most, then, this is tens of billions a year in a $25 trillion economy. That's basically a rounding error.

Compare it with 2021's American Rescue Plan. which arguably did feed inflation. That plan, however, spent $1.9 trillion in a single vear: the new Biden plan is unlikely to boost annual spending by even one-40th

Given the choice, I'd spend money on children rather than adults — and aid to families with children was, in fact, a big part of Biden's original spending plans. But he couldn't it through Congress, while debt relief is something he can probably do through executive action.

To Republicans whining that this plan does nothing for blue-collar Americans who didn't go to college, a question: What do you propose to do for such people other than cut taxes on the rich and claim that the benefits will trickle down?

So, ignore inflation scaremongers, whose numbers don't add up. Evaluate this plan in terms of political reality — in terms of what Biden can do. When you do that, it looks pretty good.

PAUL KRUGMAN writes for The

he nation's inadequate access to mental health care guarantees that many mentally ill people encounter police before they ever encounter mental health professionals.

Results often are bad for anyone. In Pennsylvania, according to multiple studies, at least a third of people in county jails suffer mental illnesses. Most of those people have been charged but have not been convicted, often in incidents that might not have happened if they had had access to services.

In Scranton, the behind-the-scenes problem exploded into public awareness in May 2009. Police shot and killed Brenda Williams, an Air Force veteran who had been diagnosed with schizophrenia. Unable to respond to officers' commands, Williams approached them with a knife and the officers shot her.

The investigation revealed that police had responded to a similar call two days earlier, and had sought but failed to obtain an involuntary mental health commitment for her.

That tragedy prompted soul-searching and the creation of a countywide commission that sought an alternative to leaving mental healthrelated calls to police.

And Northeast Pennsylvania is not alone. In many jurisdictions nationwide, police and the mental health community have experimented with ways to better handle incidents involving mentally ill people.

Scranton formally joined that effort this month by implementing the Crisis Co-Responder Team program, which includes city police and the Scranton Counseling Center. When police determine that a person has a mental health issue, they can dispatch a behavioral health specialist from the center to assess the subject's condition and connect them with services outside of law enforcement.

So far, according to Police Chief Thomas Carroll, police have asked the center for assistance in five of eight mental health-related calls since the system's implementation.

The project not only better serves people who need assistance rather than incarceration, but relieves police of a burden outside of their expertise.

Such progress is heartening but it is just one step in a painfully slow evolution toward better mental health treatment. Ongoing construction of a new 96-bed behavioral health hospital on Montage Mountain, by Geisinger Health System and Acadia Healthcare, is another significant step.

The Cognetti administration and police deserve credit for taking mental health responses outside the realm of law enforcement alone. But the greatest possible success still depends on a greater commitment from all levels of government to vastly expand access to mental health care.

State drives EVs

alifornia is by far the largest state economy, according to federal statistics. Its $3.4 trillion in annual gross domestic product is nearly $1 trillion larger than that of Texas. And, it is the largest non-national economy on the planet. By itself, California would have the world's fifth-largest economy, ahead of the United Kingdom.

California's government long has understood how to convert that economic power into national policy, especially regarding the environment. Its environmental regulations generally are tougher than federal standards, but they often prevail because companies cannot afford to not do business in California.

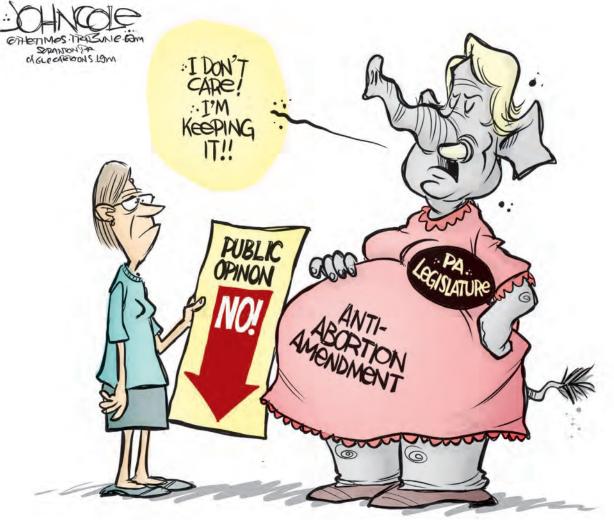

So when California Gov. Gavin Newsom announced recently that the state would not allow the sale of new gasoline- and diesel-powered vehicles beyond 2035, it vastly accelerated the ongoing global conversion to electric vehicles.

California alone accounts for about 10% of the U.S. auto market. If the 17 states that have expressed support for California's standards adopt them as their own, that would account for 40% of the U.S. market.

Globally, automakers already have invested more than $500 billion to research, develop and produce EVs. They surely will compete vigorously for the guaranteed massive California EV market.

The challenge is not just on the production side. Governments, including Pennsylvania's, must ensure that supporting infrastructure including clean-power production capacity, charging stations and non-fossil-fuel based taxation to maintain roads are in place well ahead of the California deadline.

Surgo Ventures recently announced the expansion of its COVID-19 Vaccine Ambassador Program, available in 13 community health organizations with more than 70 individual clinics across eight states. The program has the potential to reach 20,000 people who otherwise may not receive a COVID-19 vaccine and has been implemented in partnership with Uber Health and the Vaccine Access Fund, which is managed by LISC (Local Initiatives Support Corporation).

The program encourages vaccinated patients at participating clinics to tap their social networks and existing relationships to have conversations about COVID-19 vaccination. As a "vaccine ambassador," these patients receive $20 when they text at least three unvaccinated friends or family members and urge them to get vaccinated or bring an unvaccinated person to the clinic for vaccination. Uber Health transportation to the vaccination appointment can also be arranged by Scranton Primarv.

The program also equips clinic staff to be vaccine ambassadors by providing a set of personalized, behavioral science-based scripts for staff to use during interactions with unvaccinated patients.

Spain's Canary Islands an adventurous choice for 'babymoon' n the volcanic desert island of Lanzarote, I guided our rental Jeep off the highway in search of Papagavo, a legendary natural beach with red rocks, golden sand and warm blue-green waters. But when the gravel road became relentlessly herky-jerky. I began to get nervous.

STAR TRIBLINE

"Are you sure this is safe?" Sabrina asked me.

I didn't want to worry her. but I was wondering that, too. I gingerly turned the Jeep around, and we headed off for an early dinner in town.

Three months earlier Sabrina and I would have taken on such roads with aplomb while traveling abroad. But now she was 15 weeks pregnant, and we were on our "babymoon" in the Canary Islands. As anxious first-timers, we didn't want to do anything that might hurt our little avocado. (Sabrina's doctor later assured us that thanks to the shock-absorbing miracle of amniotic fluid. we would have been fine to carefully take the drive.)

babymoon is a last-hurrah vacation for expectant parents that has become a growing travel category, and a popular hashtag. A babymoon can be a grand adventure, or a relaxing escape. Either way. it's a time to reflect on where vou've been as a couple, and on the even bigger adventure that lies ahead.

Upon landing on Tenerife. the largest and most populous of the Canaries, we promptly shuttled to the island's other airport and stood by for a propeller-plane flight to Lanzarote, the easternmost island of the archipelago.

This convoluted itinerary ensured that we were among the few Americans on Lanzarote — a sort of desert version of Iceland, with endless volcanic landscapes, pregnancy-friendly temperatures in the 70s, and enchanting white-cubic architecture everywhere. But coastal parts of the island, we learned, are a popular resort for Brits. Germans and Spaniards.

For lodging, we veered inland to 5 Suites, a stylish modern guesthouse with a panoramic view of the

We did routinely head to the touristy waterfront for dinner, whether it was an all-vegan spread with an all-vinvl soundtrack at Bistro Arbol, or seafood along the boardwalk at Brisa Marina. On our last night on Lanzarote, we splurged at the over-water La Casa Roja in posh Playa Blanca, with windows in the floor for spotting sea life. It was the perfect spot for the selfie we used to finally announce our pregnancy on social media.

The last phase

On Sunday we drove to the west side of Tenerife for the final phase of our babymoon. Again staying away from the big tourist beaches to the south, we checked into a onebedroom villa at the off-thegrid, solar-powered Finca Stemann, hosted by a cheery pair of German expats. The mountainside villa had a private infinity pool overlooking La Gomera, the next volcanic island over. The closest resort area was Los Gigantes, where black cliffs rise an astonishing half-mile above the ocean and town.

Olyphant woman makes switch from chemistry lab to classroom BY GIA MAZUR hile many teachers have chosen to leave the profession over the past two years, Liz Tinney realized it was the missing part of her equation.

After beginning her career in research chemistry, the Olyphant resident went back to school to become a teacher. Today, she's a long-term substitute science teacher at Riverside Junior-Senior High School teaching physical science and chemistry.

"Never would I have ever thought I would end up here, but it's probably been where I was always supposed to end up," she said during a recent day inside the Midvalley home she shares with her husband Jeff, their three children, Aidan, 14; Avery, 12, and Logan, 10, and the family's two dogs Lincoln and Leo.

While the classroom wasn't in Tinney's initial career plan, science always was part of her future. The Midvalley woman was recruited by Merck, a biopharmaceutical company while still in college. She earned a bachelor's degree in chemistry from Lycoming College and almost immediately after graduating. Tinney began working at Merck.

She spent the next several years working for Merck, and during that time, she also earned a master's degree in pharmaceutical chemistry from Lehigh University. Then, after she relocated a few times, she and her husband married, and had their first child soon after. Around this time, Tinney decided to be a stay-at-home mom.

"That was one of the hardest things for me because I was very career-driven," she said. "I was raised by a single mom so having my career and being independent was huge. but when you have a child, ed kindergarten, Tinney your whole world changes.... returned to work, getting a I tried to go back, but I just job at a credit union. Last summer, Tinney researched programs and certifications that she would need to start in the classroom and found Misericordia University's online program to be the perfect place for her. Coach can teach you to smile like a professional

Facing fierce competition in the job market, prospective employees are shelling out $1,000 for a professional headshot hoping to gain an edge.

Apparently the "right" headshot can put you ahead of the pack. It should be an easy sprint to the front with vour wallet being so light.

Headshots with smiles are now questionable, even illadvised in some circles. Pity all that money spent on orthodontia and caps. They should have saved it to pay for the $1,000 headshots.

I also can't help but think of the line in the musical "Hamilton" where Aaron Burr advises a young Alexander Hamilton, "Talk less; smile more." If only Hamilton had listened. He could have lived a lot longer.

A number of these pricey headshot sessions come with "face-coaching."

I don't know about vou. but I could use a face coach.

I have a face that often responds before my mouth does: furrowed eyebrows, the look of shock, the squint that says, "I'll probably fact check that later," and the standard eye roll that has been getting me in trouble since age 7.

Although as a parent and grandparent, rapidresponse facial communication is extremely useful. You don't sav a word, just give the "I wasn't born yesterday" look. Or the "Sell it to someone who's buying"

Face coach, please!

Face coaching leans heavily toward the somber side. Many of the coached headshots have a look that says, "I'm serious, but a go-getter. I'm listening, but I have ideas of my own."

Some of the facial expressions are pensive and penetrating, nearly brooding, deep in thought, intensely reflective. More than a few could be mistaken for depressed poets.

Not that there's anything wrong with that; depressed

I have been teaching art for 13 A years.

How long have you been participating in the Artist of the Month program?

How many students do you have in your art classes?

On average, about 12 to 15 per Aclass.

Can you briefly describe the process your students program?

_Most of the students who submit entries for the Artist of the Month are seniors and juniors. This means I typically have had them as a student for a year or two, which gives me an idea of what subject matter and medium acrylic, colored pencil, watercolor, etc. — are the students' strengths. Together we brainstorm ideas as we discuss art style and artistic approach.

How do you help spark students' creativity?

_Teaching students to be creative by thinking outside the box is one of the most challenging tasks as an art teacher. My strategy is to get to know my students' interests and abilities. From there, a brainstorming session takes place where I will sit down and discuss their ideas and give suggestions to follow when creating art for the help solidify their artistic vision in creating a work of art that communicates meaning and evokes an emotional response. Most times, the artwork evolves throughout the process and new ideas blossom, transpiring from original sketches or references. One of the most important lessons about creating art is there are endless possibilities, and one needs to be flexible as one creates.

Do the students get excited about having their work in an exhibit and published?

_Yes, very much! Whether it is billboards, book publications, magazine cover art, exhibits in Washington D.C. and New York City, and television I have always been and always will be a huge advocate for getting my students recognized. Having the students work hard and seeing their efforts noticed by others, speaks volumes. This impact on their young lives boosts their confidence.

Do you have any good stories involving your students and their art experiences?

A proud moment as a teacher was when four of my students won medals at the Scholastic Art Awards at the national level in New York City.

In 2016, I had a student on graduation day write me a letter explaining how he regretted not taking art his senior year. He sincerely mentioned how impactful I was on his high school career and he enjoyed my class greatly. I was deeply moved by his words, thinking to myself he should be excited about graduation and the future ahead yet, he took the time to write me a letter.

How often do you have students that go on to study art in college?

_Each year. I have a couple of students who go on to pursue art for their post-secondary education.

Do you have any former students that have pursued a career in art?

_I have students who have I have students careers in computer graphics and design, animation, product design, art education and film, just to name a few.

Can you tell us about your creative endeavors outside of school?

_Aside from the busy demands of fatherhood, I make time to do my own fine art photography. I have five of my photography portfolios published in LensWork magazine.

I have also been learning and sharing with my students the challenging process of tintype photography. A tintype, also known as a ferrotype, is a wet plate collodion photographic process — invented in the 1850s in France — that creates an image on a thin sheet of metal or iron that has been coated with a dark lacquer or enamel. The tintype process results in a strong image that draws the viewer's eyes. Because they were sturdy and durable enough to be shipped to loved ones, this made tintype portraits a popular choice for soldiers of the American Civil War.

HOROSCOPE

BY EUGENIA LAST

UNITED FEATURE SYNDICATE

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – Finish what you start before you share it to avoid interference. Someone you think you can count on for sound advice will mislead you or cause uncertainty. Don't put yourself in a vulnerable position.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) – Ease into situations and get the lowdown before acting. Pay attention to how others respond to you, and you'll discover what's to come. Prepare for change, but adopt only what's necessary.

SCORPÍO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) – Acting in haste will lead to mistakes. You may desire change, but problems will make your goal difficult to achieve unless all the components are in place. Don't put yourself in a compromising position.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) – Clear a space to accommodate what you want to pursue. Making a station at home for your equipment, supplies or something that can make your life easier will pay CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – Put more thought into what you have, what you want and how to reach your goal. Don't wait for someone to make the first move. Set your sights on your target and don't let anyone lead you astray.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) – Don't start a feud. Be a good listener and offer positive feedback. How you conduct yourself in front of others will affect how easy it will be for you to get your way. Spend less.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) – Reach out to people who share your interests; together, you will bring about positive change. Put your energy where it will have the most significant effect.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) – You'll find a path that leads to happiness once you make your voice heard and are true to yourself. Self-improvement will be enlightening and will encourage you to put a positive spin on your life.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – Monitor change carefully. Don't feel obligated to follow someone if you don't agree with them. Put your energy into something that will help you get ahead. Educational pursuits will be inspiring.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – Don't share sensitive information. You'll avoid unwanted questions if you keep your personal life a mystery. Focus on doing what puts a smile on your face without depleting your bank account.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) – Dive into something that intrigues you. Give your creativity free rein to explore possibilities. Learn through observation, trial and error, and from the experts. Be intelligent and dedicated.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – Don't take on too much physically or financially. Put your effort where it will bring the highest return. Don't waste time trying to convince others to participate in your plan.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY

Take a moment to reevaluate the past, present and future. Learn from your mistakes, consider what's possible and change what isn't working for you. Budget for your plans and eliminate anything that isn't justified. Action speaks louder than words, and a targeted approach will work well. Keep personal matters a secret.

PBS premieres Season 2 of 'Guilt'

ON THE COVER

BY DANA SIMPSON TV MEDIA

From Canada to the United States to the U.K., there is no denying that TV fans love a good bit of crime. Whether it comes in the form of a true crime documentary, a laughout-loud heist comedy or, as is the case with the Scottish series "Guilt," a darkly comedic thriller, nothing gets the blood flowing like murder on the small screen.

Coming back to PBS Sunday, Aug. 28, for its second season, "Guilt" ups the ante and prepares to deliver even more deliciously dark and depraved dealings following the first season's hit-and-run accident.

For those who haven't vet indulged in the thriller comedy (Season 1 spoilers ahead), "Guilt" follows two wildly different brothers, Jake (Jamie Sives, "Valhalla Rising," 2009) and Max McCall (Mark Bonnar, "Catastrophe"), who, upon returning one night from a wedding, hit and kill an old man on the road home. Despite at first hoping that they only wounded the man. Jake and Max soon decide they are in over their heads and they flee the scene of the crime. Of course, the man's death shows up in the local newspaper the following day.

Instantly plagued with guilt, any hope the men had of moving forward with a "normal" life came crashing down with the arrival of a young American woman named Angie (Ruth Bradley, "Flyboys," 2006), who claims to be a niece of Walter's (new talent Joe Donnelly), the man they killed.

As with many crime series, things begin to get even more complicated from here. Each brother both determined to keep their mutual secret safemakes a decision. While Max opts to hire a private investigator, hoping to assuage Angie's fears and reaffirm their innocence (no doubt a risky move). Jake becomes intimately involved with Angie (also not necessarily wise).

As the situation becomes more and more complicated over the course of the first season's four episodes, the brothers learn that neither of them knows exactly what he is doing. To make matters worse, they begin to suspect further crimes on the part of those around them, from Angie herself to Walter's friendly neighbor, Sheila (Ellie Haddington, "Fantastic Beasts and Where to Find Them," 2016), the supposed sole witness to the brothers' crime.

Sara Vickers and Mark Bonnar in "Guilt"

By the end of the show's premiere season, Alex and Jake begin to question just how involved Sheila really was in the circumstances surrounding Walter's death that night and the secret comes out, leading to Max's arrest for manslaughter.

Now, as Season 2 begins on PBS (it aired October 2021 on BBC in the U.K.), another four episodes are dedicated to the McCalls and their connection to a mysterious set of events. Beginning as shots ring out in an Edinburgh cellar, viewers soon learn Max is being released from prison on the other side of the city.

Returning alongside Max (and later, Jake) for Season 2 are characters Kenny Burns (Emun Elliott, "Star Wars: Episode VII - The Force Awakens," 2015), the private eye hired to investigate Walter's death in Season

1, and DC Stevie Malone (Henry Pettigrew, "The Danish Girl," 2015) of the Edinburgh police department.

Joining the show for the first time, meanwhile, are Erin (Sara Vickers, "Watchmen"), a young woman struggling to come to terms with her troubled family life; Erin's father, Roy (Stuart Bowman, "Versailles"), a criminal kingpin with many shady projects: Erin's mother. Maggie (Phyllis Logan, "Downton Abbey"), who has also been greatly affected by Roy's wrongdoings; and Yvonne (Rochelle Neill, "The Nevers"), a streetwise police detective Kenny meets while attending an Alcoholics Anonymous meeting. Ian Pirie ("The Last Duel," 2021) also stars as Sandy.

In speaking with the media ahead of "Guilt's" Season 2 release in the U.K., series star Bonnar gave a little taste of what's to come for his character. Max.

"Max is a survivor, if anything else," Bonnar said. "He is very clever and knows how to manipulate situations to his advantage so he won't be on his uppers forever."

He later added that Max "can turn on a sixpence if the situation requires, and that's a very sexy, devilish quality we all admire."
